

GIFTS

By Gary L. Richardson, noted trial lawyer and author of Black Robe Fever, Fear Is Never Our Friend, and Thank God They Ate the Apple.

www.garyrichardsonspeaks.com

The first time I heard anyone say that "everything in life is a gift," I completely and totally disagreed and had no reservations about believing I was correct in my position. No Way!!! I could instantly think of a number of things in my life, both present and past, that were NOT gifts, by any stretch of the imagination. I also could immediately think of a number of things in my life that in no way could be considered a GIFT.

On top of all this, in the fall of 2000 I heard this statement made in a speech by a lawyer, of all things. The speaker was Gerry Spence, a nationally known trial lawyer from Wyoming. He is highly esteemed and is considered to be in the same category as Clarence Darrow, long reputed as the greatest lawyer of all time.

Possibly you have seen Gerry Spence on national TV. He often has appeared as a legal expert for various networks during high-profile cases, probably the most noted being the O. J. Simpson case tried in California in the mid-90s. Remember the older gentleman with rather long grey hair who wore leather coats with a lot of fringe? That was Gerry Spence.

I heard this "everything is a gift" statement in Wyoming while attending a three-week training conference that is conducted annually by Gerry and his group of experts. The program uses psychodrama in its training, and it is quite difficult to get accepted as a participant since only 48 lawyers across the nation are invited each year. The main purpose of the program is to help the attendees learn more about themselves, as it has long been known that the more we know ourselves, the more we will know others.

It was during the last session of this three-week program when Gerry was giving his farewell speech that he made this statement: "EVERYTHING IN LIFE IS A GIFT." He did not say "may be a gift," he did not say "can be a gift," he said "IS A GIFT."

Like other things that I so strongly disagreed with at the time of hearing them, I decided to do some research. A seed had been planted and I found myself unable to just take issue with it and let it stop there. I had to know. Is there any truth to this statement made by this highly renowned trial lawyer? The only place I knew to go in order to research a statement such as this was the Bible. So, to the Bible I went.

I would say that it took roughly two years of studying, thinking and meditating on this statement before coming to the conclusion/conviction, and totally embracing the thought/concept/belief, that truly, "everything in life is a gift." TODAY I embrace this concept every bit as much as I resisted it in the fall of 2000.

One might ask the question, "What is the benefit of embracing such a concept?" Well, Gerry Spence didn't answer this question. He just threw the statement out much like throwing a grenade in the middle of a group of people. Possibly that is where I should leave you and, as Gerry did, leave it to you to find your own answer/s. But, then again, how could I do that knowing how free from bondages that haunt their lives one becomes after embracing this "gifts" concept?

Anything that has occurred in your life, whether in your childhood, teens or last week, that you have not seen as a gift, you are in bondage to. Anything you are in bondage to will, without question, hamper you in your search for peace, joy and good health. Fact!!!! You might say, "Gary, there is no way I could embrace my childhood as a gift." Sure you can. It's a choice.

Let me tell you about Katy (not her real name). I handled a lawsuit for Katy that resulted in going to mediation. Katy had been terribly abused by her employer for two years. This employer had moved her office nine times, and the last move placed her in an abandoned restroom with a makeshift desk where she sat just two feet from a commode. Katy had a doctorate in communications and had a five-year contract with the company, so they knew they couldn't just fire her. Thus, they set out to make her life miserable.

During the mediation I was blown away by how calm Katy was and how she never once made disparaging remarks or attacks against her employer or the company she worked for. What a lady. Katy very unemotionally would explain to the mediator the facts as to what she had experienced over the two years.

The next day I emailed Katy and told her how impressed I was at what seemed to be unbelievable emotional and spiritual growth for such a young age (she was in her mid-30s). I asked if she had an explanation for this. Katy immediately responded and said that no one should have to endure the childhood that she had but that she had a few short years ago come to the place of seeing that it was all to be used in her life so that she might be able to help others. She just as easily and accurately could have said she had come to see her childhood experience as a GIFT. Those of you that believe in God's word might recall Romans 8:28 (And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose). Katy stood on this scripture as TRUTH.

Rather than Katy allowing her devastating childhood experiences to destroy her, she "embraced" them and allowed them to EMPOWER her. How? She recognized that these experiences have value. Believe me, they always do.

A few years ago I mediated a case for Jim (not his real name), a young man who was molested in a hospital, as a patient, by a male doctor. Jim kept telling his wife what was going on and the doctor kept telling the wife that Jim was on drugs and might say anything. Jim had his wife install a camera in his room, and, yes, they caught the doctor in the act. I was hired and we filed suit.

This personal violation so impacted Jim that he completely quit attending church where he previously had taught Sunday school classes, sang in the choir and occasionally spoke from the pulpit. He had been devastated. I asked Jim on the day of mediation what this distancing himself from church was all about, and he began to shake, tear up, and in a low voice said, "I can't believe God let this happen to me," to which I responded that I understood, that there are things in life that we can't at times find answers to.

Later in the day, after settling Jim's case, he told me that he and his wife were going to get a divorce. He said they had agreed to stay together until the case was over, but there was so much water under the bridge that they knew the marriage was over, notwithstanding the fact that they had two small daughters. I asked Jim if I could speak personally into his life, and he said, "Yes."

I said, "Jim, what I am going to say to you I do not believe you will agree with and that is ok. All I ask of you is to give me the opportunity to explain why I believe what I am going to say is true. Will you do that?" He replied that he would. I then said, "Jim, what happened to you four years ago in that hospital room was a GIFT." You can imagine the look on his face. Then I said, "Now may I explain why I believe this is true?" and he allowed me to do so.

The end result was that Jim and his wife didn't get a divorce, and this was nine years ago. Jim has written me emails that bring tears to my eyes just reflecting on them. He has the best job today that he has ever had and life for Jim is beautiful. He accepted the fact that "everything in life is a gift." I wish this article had room for me to tell you all that I said to Jim and to share his emails. Maybe another day.

QUESTION: What do I mean by a gift? ANSWER: Something used for your good; things that look so bad at the time but have life lessons wrapped up in them; experiences that looked so bad at the time but helped us somehow along the way. Turn the bad things loose. Accept them as "gifts" and you will experience a tremendous release from the bondage they hold over your life. Don't wait until you "see" them as good, as in some cases, that won't ever happen. Just accept this phenomenon as true and do it. Your life won't ever be the same.

Some may say that this thought is only for those who believe in the Bible. I will say that believing in the scriptures, in my mind, makes it easier to come to this position. But, I do know those that have come to embrace this concept and do not consider themselves to be Christians.

Don't let feeble excuses stop you from moving on. It is your thinking that holds control over you, not something that occurred 30 years ago. Think about it. Believe it or not, it is your choice and the choice you make will result in a life-impacting decision.

###

GIFTS

By Gary L. Richardson, noted trial lawyer and author of Black Robe Fever, Fear Is Never Our Friend, and Thank God They Ate the Apple.

www.garyrichardsonspeaks.com

The first time I heard anyone say that "everything in life is a gift," I completely and totally disagreed and had no reservations about believing I was correct in my position. No Way!!! I could instantly think of a number of things in my life, both present and past, that were NOT gifts, by any stretch of the imagination. I also could immediately think of a number of things in my life that in no way could be considered a GIFT.

On top of all this, in the fall of 2000 I heard this statement made in a speech by a lawyer, of all things. The speaker was Gerry Spence, a nationally known trial lawyer from Wyoming. He is highly esteemed and is considered to be in the same category as Clarence Darrow, long reputed as the greatest lawyer of all time.

Possibly you have seen Gerry Spence on national TV. He often has appeared as a legal expert for various networks during high-profile cases, probably the most noted being the O. J. Simpson case tried in California in the mid-90s. Remember the older gentleman with rather long grey hair who wore leather coats with a lot of fringe? That was Gerry Spence.

I heard this "everything is a gift" statement in Wyoming while attending a three-week training conference that is conducted annually by Gerry and his group of experts. The program uses psychodrama in its training, and it is quite difficult to get accepted as a participant since only 48 lawyers across the nation are invited each year. The main purpose of the program is to help the attendees learn more about themselves, as it has long been known that the more we know ourselves, the more we will know others.

It was during the last session of this three-week program when Gerry was giving his farewell speech that he made this statement: "EVERYTHING IN LIFE IS A GIFT." He did not say "may be a gift," he did not say "can be a gift," he said "IS A GIFT."

Like other things that I so strongly disagreed with at the time of hearing them, I decided to do some research. A seed had been planted and I found myself unable to just take issue with it and let it stop there. I had to know. Is there any truth to this statement made by this highly renowned trial lawyer? The only place I knew to go in order to research a statement such as this was the Bible. So, to the Bible I went.

I would say that it took roughly two years of studying, thinking and meditating on this statement before coming to the conclusion/conviction, and totally embracing the thought/concept/belief, that truly, "everything in life is a gift." TODAY I embrace this concept every bit as much as I resisted it in the fall of 2000.

One might ask the question, "What is the benefit of embracing such a concept?" Well, Gerry Spence didn't answer this question. He just threw the statement out much like throwing a grenade in the middle of a group of people. Possibly that is where I should leave you and, as Gerry did, leave it to you to find your own answer/s. But, then again, how could I do that knowing how free from bondages that haunt their lives one becomes after embracing this "gifts" concept?

Anything that has occurred in your life, whether in your childhood, teens or last week, that you have not seen as a gift, you are in bondage to. Anything you are in bondage to will, without question, hamper you in your search for peace, joy and good health. Fact!!!! You might say, "Gary, there is no way I could embrace my childhood as a gift." Sure you can. It's a choice.

Let me tell you about Katy (not her real name). I handled a lawsuit for Katy that resulted in going to mediation. Katy had been terribly abused by her employer for two years. This employer had moved her office nine times, and the last move placed her in an abandoned restroom with a makeshift desk where she sat just two feet from a commode. Katy had a doctorate in communications and had a five-year contract with the company, so they knew they couldn't just fire her. Thus, they set out to make her life miserable.

During the mediation I was blown away by how calm Katy was and how she never once made disparaging remarks or attacks against her employer or the company she worked for. What a lady. Katy very unemotionally would explain to the mediator the facts as to what she had experienced over the two years.

The next day I emailed Katy and told her how impressed I was at what seemed to be unbelievable emotional and spiritual growth for such a young age (she was in her mid-30s). I asked if she had an explanation for this. Katy immediately responded and said that no one should have to endure the childhood that she had but that she had a few short years ago come to the place of seeing that it was all to be used in her life so that she might be able to help others. She just as easily and accurately could have said she had come to see her childhood experience as a GIFT. Those of you that believe in God's word might recall Romans 8:28 (And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose). Katy stood on this scripture as TRUTH.

Rather than Katy allowing her devastating childhood experiences to destroy her, she "embraced" them and allowed them to EMPOWER her. How? She recognized that these experiences have value. Believe me, they always do.

A few years ago I mediated a case for Jim (not his real name), a young man who was molested in a hospital, as a patient, by a male doctor. Jim kept telling his wife what was going on and the doctor kept telling the wife that Jim was on drugs and might say anything. Jim had his wife install a camera in his room, and, yes, they caught the doctor in the act. I was hired and we filed suit.

This personal violation so impacted Jim that he completely quit attending church where he previously had taught Sunday school classes, sang in the choir and occasionally spoke from the pulpit. He had been devastated. I asked Jim on the day of mediation what this distancing himself from church was all about, and he began to shake, tear up, and in a low voice said, "I can't believe God let this happen to me," to which I responded that I understood, that there are things in life that we can't at times find answers to.

Later in the day, after settling Jim's case, he told me that he and his wife were going to get a divorce. He said they had agreed to stay together until the case was over, but there was so much water under the bridge that they knew the marriage was over, notwithstanding the fact that they had two small daughters. I asked Jim if I could speak personally into his life, and he said, "Yes."

I said, "Jim, what I am going to say to you I do not believe you will agree with and that is ok. All I ask of you is to give me the opportunity to explain why I believe what I am going to say is true. Will you do that?" He replied that he would. I then said, "Jim, what happened to you four years ago in that hospital room was a GIFT." You can imagine the look on his face. Then I said, "Now may I explain why I believe this is true?" and he allowed me to do so.

The end result was that Jim and his wife didn't get a divorce, and this was nine years ago. Jim has written me emails that bring tears to my eyes just reflecting on them. He has the best job today that he has ever had and life for Jim is beautiful. He accepted the fact that "everything in life is a gift." I wish this article had room for me to tell you all that I said to Jim and to share his emails. Maybe another day.

QUESTION: What do I mean by a gift? ANSWER: Something used for your good; things that look so bad at the time but have life lessons wrapped up in them; experiences that looked so bad at the time but helped us somehow along the way. Turn the bad things loose. Accept them as "gifts" and you will experience a tremendous release from the bondage they hold over your life. Don't wait until you "see" them as good, as in some cases, that won't ever happen. Just accept this phenomenon as true and do it. Your life won't ever be the same.

Some may say that this thought is only for those who believe in the Bible. I will say that believing in the scriptures, in my mind, makes it easier to come to this position. But, I do know those that have come to embrace this concept and do not consider themselves to be Christians.

Don't let feeble excuses stop you from moving on. It is your thinking that holds control over you, not something that occurred 30 years ago. Think about it. Believe it or not, it is your choice and the choice you make will result in a life-impacting decision.

###

GIFTS

By Gary L. Richardson, noted trial lawyer and author of Black Robe Fever, Fear Is Never Our Friend, and Thank God They Ate the Apple.

www.garyrichardsonspeaks.com

The first time I heard anyone say that "everything in life is a gift," I completely and totally disagreed and had no reservations about believing I was correct in my position. No Way!!! I could instantly think of a number of things in my life, both present and past, that were NOT gifts, by any stretch of the imagination. I also could immediately think of a number of things in my life that in no way could be considered a GIFT.

On top of all this, in the fall of 2000 I heard this statement made in a speech by a lawyer, of all things. The speaker was Gerry Spence, a nationally known trial lawyer from Wyoming. He is highly esteemed and is considered to be in the same category as Clarence Darrow, long reputed as the greatest lawyer of all time.

Possibly you have seen Gerry Spence on national TV. He often has appeared as a legal expert for various networks during high-profile cases, probably the most noted being the O. J. Simpson case tried in California in the mid-90s. Remember the older gentleman with rather long grey hair who wore leather coats with a lot of fringe? That was Gerry Spence.

I heard this "everything is a gift" statement in Wyoming while attending a three-week training conference that is conducted annually by Gerry and his group of experts. The program uses psychodrama in its training, and it is quite difficult to get accepted as a participant since only 48 lawyers across the nation are invited each year. The main purpose of the program is to help the attendees learn more about themselves, as it has long been known that the more we know ourselves, the more we will know others.

It was during the last session of this three-week program when Gerry was giving his farewell speech that he made this statement: "EVERYTHING IN LIFE IS A GIFT." He did not say "may be a gift," he did not say "can be a gift," he said "IS A GIFT."

Like other things that I so strongly disagreed with at the time of hearing them, I decided to do some research. A seed had been planted and I found myself unable to just take issue with it and let it stop there. I had to know. Is there any truth to this statement made by this highly renowned trial lawyer? The only place I knew to go in order to research a statement such as this was the Bible. So, to the Bible I went.

I would say that it took roughly two years of studying, thinking and meditating on this statement before coming to the conclusion/conviction, and totally embracing the thought/concept/belief, that truly, "everything in life is a gift." TODAY I embrace this concept every bit as much as I resisted it in the fall of 2000.

One might ask the question, "What is the benefit of embracing such a concept?" Well, Gerry Spence didn't answer this question. He just threw the statement out much like throwing a grenade in the middle of a group of people. Possibly that is where I should leave you and, as Gerry did, leave it to you to find your own answer/s. But, then again, how could I do that knowing how free from bondages that haunt their lives one becomes after embracing this "gifts" concept?

Anything that has occurred in your life, whether in your childhood, teens or last week, that you have not seen as a gift, you are in bondage to. Anything you are in bondage to will, without question, hamper you in your search for peace, joy and good health. Fact!!!! You might say, "Gary, there is no way I could embrace my childhood as a gift." Sure you can. It's a choice.

Let me tell you about Katy (not her real name). I handled a lawsuit for Katy that resulted in going to mediation. Katy had been terribly abused by her employer for two years. This employer had moved her office nine times, and the last move placed her in an abandoned restroom with a makeshift desk where she sat just two feet from a commode. Katy had a doctorate in communications and had a five-year contract with the company, so they knew they couldn't just fire her. Thus, they set out to make her life miserable.

During the mediation I was blown away by how calm Katy was and how she never once made disparaging remarks or attacks against her employer or the company she worked for. What a lady. Katy very unemotionally would explain to the mediator the facts as to what she had experienced over the two years.

The next day I emailed Katy and told her how impressed I was at what seemed to be unbelievable emotional and spiritual growth for such a young age (she was in her mid-30s). I asked if she had an explanation for this. Katy immediately responded and said that no one should have to endure the childhood that she had but that she had a few short years ago come to the place of seeing that it was all to be used in her life so that she might be able to help others. She just as easily and accurately could have said she had come to see her childhood experience as a GIFT. Those of you that believe in God's word might recall Romans 8:28 (And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose). Katy stood on this scripture as TRUTH.

Rather than Katy allowing her devastating childhood experiences to destroy her, she "embraced" them and allowed them to EMPOWER her. How? She recognized that these experiences have value. Believe me, they always do.

A few years ago I mediated a case for Jim (not his real name), a young man who was molested in a hospital, as a patient, by a male doctor. Jim kept telling his wife what was going on and the doctor kept telling the wife that Jim was on drugs and might say anything. Jim had his wife install a camera in his room, and, yes, they caught the doctor in the act. I was hired and we filed suit.

This personal violation so impacted Jim that he completely quit attending church where he previously had taught Sunday school classes, sang in the choir and occasionally spoke from the pulpit. He had been devastated. I asked Jim on the day of mediation what this distancing himself from church was all about, and he began to shake, tear up, and in a low voice said, "I can't believe God let this happen to me," to which I responded that I understood, that there are things in life that we can't at times find answers to.

Later in the day, after settling Jim's case, he told me that he and his wife were going to get a divorce. He said they had agreed to stay together until the case was over, but there was so much water under the bridge that they knew the marriage was over, notwithstanding the fact that they had two small daughters. I asked Jim if I could speak personally into his life, and he said, "Yes."

I said, "Jim, what I am going to say to you I do not believe you will agree with and that is ok. All I ask of you is to give me the opportunity to explain why I believe what I am going to say is true. Will you do that?" He replied that he would. I then said, "Jim, what happened to you four years ago in that hospital room was a GIFT." You can imagine the look on his face. Then I said, "Now may I explain why I believe this is true?" and he allowed me to do so.

The end result was that Jim and his wife didn't get a divorce, and this was nine years ago. Jim has written me emails that bring tears to my eyes just reflecting on them. He has the best job today that he has ever had and life for Jim is beautiful. He accepted the fact that "everything in life is a gift." I wish this article had room for me to tell you all that I said to Jim and to share his emails. Maybe another day.

QUESTION: What do I mean by a gift? ANSWER: Something used for your good; things that look so bad at the time but have life lessons wrapped up in them; experiences that looked so bad at the time but helped us somehow along the way. Turn the bad things loose. Accept them as "gifts" and you will experience a tremendous release from the bondage they hold over your life. Don't wait until you "see" them as good, as in some cases, that won't ever happen. Just accept this phenomenon as true and do it. Your life won't ever be the same.

Some may say that this thought is only for those who believe in the Bible. I will say that believing in the scriptures, in my mind, makes it easier to come to this position. But, I do know those that have come to embrace this concept and do not consider themselves to be Christians.

Don't let feeble excuses stop you from moving on. It is your thinking that holds control over you, not something that occurred 30 years ago. Think about it. Believe it or not, it is your choice and the choice you make will result in a life-impacting decision.

###